

Heavy Snows in Eastern New Mexico

Eastern New Mexico Lands Deeply Covered.

Dense fog and drizzling rain covered the Eastern part of the country in and surrounding Clovis Sunday and Monday, followed by a heavy snow which has been falling almost continuously for 20 hours covering the ground to a depth of 10 inches or more and is of inestimable value to the country.

There has been predicted for New Mexico this winter, twenty-two inches of snow and at present eight of this number has fallen, putting a nice winter moisture in the ground, and with rains of the summer, the harvesting of a bountiful harvest next fall.
